High-Growth Firms (HGFs) make a considerable contribution to innovation, economic development, and societal well-being. But it remains a difficult task to find the determinants of firm growth. What are the effects of high growth on firms and industries? How can firms prepare for rapid growth? How can public policy support HGFs? Explaining firms' growth rates is still a challenge for scholars in entrepreneurship, economics and business. Although the literature has been growing in the last two decades, there remain many unanswered questions.

The journal Cuadernos de Economía invites authors to submit papers for a special issue on High-Growth Firms. We seek original research papers and we welcome different theoretical perspectives and new empirical evidence. Potential topics that are covered by this special issues include the determinants and consequences of rapid growth, characterization of HGFs by age, sector, and organizational strategy, and public policy to promote HGFs. Moreover, we will consider manuscripts with novel and relevant contributions on theoretical or measurement issues. Although the focus is general, we welcome contributions from Latin American countries, where the evidence is scarcer.

Articles should be in English, and between 4.000 and 10.000 words, including references. Articles will be published as open access articles. There is no submission or publication fee.

Submissions should follow the instructions for authors, available in the journal website (<http://www.fce.unal.edu.co/cuadernos/pautas>). Submissions must be done through the OJS editorial management system: <http://www.revistas.unal.edu.co/index.php/ceconomia>
